

One of the best things that the State of Indiana has done for its citizens is to enact the Telephone Privacy Law. The number of unsolicited sales calls that I receive has dropped precipitously since placing my name on the 'Do Not Call List.'

I believe that the FCC should NOT implement any proposal that would undermine the effectiveness of Indiana's (or any other state's) Telephone Privacy law. While not a perfect solution, it has served the folks of Indiana well in providing protection from the annoyance of many unwanted sales calls.

Business has invaded all of our lives through advertising on TV, radio, magazines, newspapers and junk mail. It should NOT be allowed further access into our private lives via the telephone.

Modern life has become over-commercialized in every respect the way it is. PLEASE, do not implement rules that would allow every sales person access to what little time we have left to spend at home with our families.
